It might be Taylor Swift's birthday, but her fans are arguably the ones being showered with gifts.

Mere days after announcing her unexpected ninth studio album *evermore, Taylor is back with a couple of new surprises — just in time for her 31st birthday on December 13. “Not to be all ‘iTs mY BiRtHdAY & I jUsT wAnNa DaNcE’ but... it is and I do,” Taylor wrote on social media Sunday morning before announcing a brand-new version of her latest single “willow” (AKA the first track off of evermore). “So here’s the willow dancing witch version, remixed by Elvira, a badass female producer I really respect,” she added.

The remix is a more upbeat, electrified version of the previous track we've been playing on repeat all weekend — and it's definitely the perfect backdrop for having a magical dance party with your coven. Add that to the list of things I plan to do in the After Times!

In addition to the updated rendition of “willow,” Taylor’s website has been affixed with brand-new, limited edition evermore merch — including a birthday jewelry collection with nods to her new music.

With the “arcade ring,” ($35) fans can sport two delicate starbursts on their finger; the antique finish ring is inlaid with gilson fire blue opal and a scattering of crystals. And if you want to round off the pairing, there’s also the “opal eyes” earring set ($30), composed of starburst studs in the same shape and color as the ring.
